RYAN BELIEVES HEALTH CARE WILL PASS SENATE

House Speaker Paul Ryan says "I believe we can get 51 votes out of the Senate" for the Republican plan to overhaul the U.S. health care system. Speaking on CBS News' "Face the Nation" program, Ryan said, "This is what the legislative process looks like ... people are going to try to negotiate." "Negotiations and compromises occur when you're writing law and what we're seeing and hearing is just that," Ryan said. The plan cleared its first hurdles in Congress on Thursday, but its chances for passage looked uncertain and top Republicans scrambled to bring disgruntled conservatives aboard. REUTERS

10 YEARS FOR WHITE HOUSE FENCE SCALING

2 An intruder carrying a backpack was arrested after scaling a fence around the White House and entering the grounds, the U.S. Secret Service said on Saturday, in the latest breach of security at the president's official residence. President Donald Trump was inside the White House when the male suspect climbed over the fence on the complex's South Grounds at 11:38 p.m.

on Friday, and uniformed officers arrested him, the Secret Service said in a statement. The suspect, identified in court documents as California resident Jonathan Tran, 26, is scheduled to appear in federal court on Monday after a judge on Saturday ordered him held without bond, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia said.

DAMASCUS BOMBINGS DEATH TOLL CLIMBS TO 74

3 The death toll from a double bomb attack targeting Shi'ites visiting a pilgrimage site in Damascus has climbed to 74, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights reported on Sunday. Most of the dead in Saturday's attack were Iraqi Shi'ites who were going to visit a cemetery near the Old City of Damascus. There has been no claim of responsibility. The Hezbollah-run al-Manar TV station said it was carried out by two suicide bombers. Syrian President Bashar al-Assad has been supported in the country's war by Shi'ite militias from countries including Iraq, Afghanistan and Lebanon. REUTERS

ST. PATRICK RE-ENACTMENT

5 St. Patrick, played by Marty Burns, sails past Down Cathedral as the re-enactment of the first landing of St. Patrick on Irish shores takes place at Inch Abbey on Sunday in Downpatrick, Northern Ireland. The Irish annals for the fifth century date Patrick's arrival in Ireland at 432 and the patron saint of Ireland's remains are believed to be buried at Down Cathedral. St. Patrick's Day itself is celebrated around the world on March 17. GETTY IMAGES

HAITI BUS PLOWS INTO PARADE, 38 KILLED

4 At least 38 people were killed and about a dozen injured in northern Haiti late on Saturday after a bus drove into a parade of pedestrians while fleeing from an accident, the country's civil protection authorities said on Sunday. The bus, which was traveling from Cap-Haitien to the capital Port-au-Prince, initially hit two people in a town outside Gonaives in the north of the country, killing one, said Joseph Faustin, civil protection head in the Artibonite department. The bus driver then fled and crashed into three "rara" parades in Mapou, about 3 miles away, Faustin said. Rara parades, which usually take place around Easter, are groupings of musicians playing traditional instruments who are often joined by passers-by. In total, 34 people were killed at the scene and another four people died in hospital. REUTERS

Storm to bring blizzard conditions to Boston area

Forecasters predict more than a foot of snow.

ERIN TIERNAN
@MetroNewYork
erin.tiernan@metro.us

Bostonians are dusting off their space savers as winter prepares to throw its final punch. The region is expected to see 12 to 18 inches of snow in Tuesday's blizzard, according to the National Weather Service.

A blizzard watch goes into effect late tonight and will remain throughout the day Tuesday as snow is expected to batter the city late into the evening.

The classic nor'easter, dubbed Winter Storm Stella, is expected to begin dumping snow on Boston and the surrounding area late tonight.

Temperatures will linger in the upper 20s. Heavy winds of more than 35 mph will come with the Nor'easter, and residents should be prepared for power outages as tree limbs and power lines could come down, according to the Ever-source.

"Whiteout conditions will be possible, making travel very dangerous," according to the blizzard watch.

Logan Airport was already diverting and rescheduling Tuesday flights as of Sunday afternoon.

The T and buses will run Tuesday even if the governor declares a snow emergency, MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo said.

Space savers can be used to claim parking spots for up to 48 hours after a snow emergency is ended, according to city officials. The National Weather Service is strongly discouraging travel Tuesday, and the snowfall is slated to begin before most morning commuters would even hit the road. For most of Massachusetts, it is expected to begin prior to 8 a.m.

Report: State among top 10 for solar energy

The future of solar energy in Massachusetts is looking bright.

The commonwealth has the second-highest amount of solar industry jobs in the country and is in the top 10 for solar energy-producing states, according to a new report.

Solar energy has been expanding across the country; 2016 saw a 97 percent growth in the U.S. solar market, Solar Energy Industries Association's (SEIA) year-in-review data showed.

Massachusetts in particular played a big role. In total, Massachusetts has more than 14,500 solar jobs. That's second only to California, which has long been a leader in clean energy. Despite that, Massachusetts has the highest ratio of solar jobs to the size of its overall workforce.

Over the next five years, according to SEIA, Massachusetts could add more than 2,000 more megawatts of solar energy to that existing infrastructure.

For more information about the state's progress in solar energy production see metro.us.

Television is packed this season with con-man shows. There are five — count 'em, five — crowding the airwaves. And that's not even counting the con-man show that's on all the news channels 24 hours a day.

That one has different titles on different networks.

CNN: "Putin's Puppet Who Stole the Election: Is He Crazy, Corrupt or Senile?"

MSNBC: "The 25th Amendment."

Fox: "We Won. You Lost. He's the Greatest."

Univision: "Bad Hombre in the Casa Blanca."

C-SPAN: "We're Trying to Make This Boring — We Just Can't."

Bloomberg: "Holy Christmas! Look at the Dow!"

By whatever show name, the con man in the White House has plenty of genre competition. ABC's "The Catch." TNT's "Good Behavior." Bravo's "Imposters." Hulu's "Shut Eye." Amazon's "Sneaky Pete."

Heck, even I'm writing a book right now called "The Uninvited," which is about — you guessed it — a con man. My guy ends up, all true, singing on stage at the Grammys, partying at the Kremlin and driving the president's motorcade. A different president. You'll see when the book comes out in November.

For now, Donald Trump is the one defining for all of us what it means to be a con man.

"Obama bugged me."

"The Muslim ban isn't a Muslim ban."

"I'll protect your Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid."

"Mexico will pay for the wall."

"We're draining the swamp in Washington."

"You'll love the new health plan."

Come on, don't you believe him? He's the president. Why would he lie?

DO YOU AGREE?

Gay vets group now allowed to march in South Boston St. Pat's parade Controversy engulfed the South Boston St. Patrick's Day Parade this week when organizers said they would not allow a gay veterans group to take part.

On Friday, that decision was reversed, and now OutVets, the LGBTQ veterans organization, can walk in the March 19 parade, and can hold their rainbow flag.

OutVets announced the reversal on its Facebook page, saying it had received a letter from the Allied War Veterans Council, which runs the parade. OutVets said it is reviewing the letter.

The Veterans Council also took to Twitter to announce that it had extended a letter of acceptance to OutVets, inviting the organization to march.

Earlier this week, the council voted 9-4 to deny OutVets' participation. Organizers cited that OutVets' logo, which features a rainbow flag, was in violation of the council's code of conduct. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

What is Rob Kardashian's deal?

Over the weekend, Rob Kardashian was spotted shopping for a $6.9 million home. I guess reality television pays extremely well, huh? The 29-year-old has been renting out one of many homes owned by his half-sister Kylie Jenner since December. And now, according to Hollywood Life, he's looking at a home that's just a hop, skip and jog around the corner from Blac Chyna, and their young daughter Dream (ugh) Kardashian. Is this part of a complex, convoluted plan to win Chyna back? I don't know! The two became engaged last April, but their most recent dramatic split was in December. So yeah, we'll see.

Did Miley and Liam tie the knot?

Poor Billy Ray Cyrus. He knows, deep down, that he'll never return to his "Achy Breaky Heart" glory days, and now he's been relegated to the back seat as his daughter Miley steals the spotlight with her wacky, cultural appropriating ways.

He's in a desperate way for some attention. So he posted to Instagram to make it seem like his daughter was walking down the aisle.

Daddy Cyrus posted an image of a joyous Miley — and incidentally, she's wearing a white dress. He wrote, "I'm so happy... you are happy @mileycyrus." As it does, the internet went wild with speculation that the pop star had secretly wed her longtime partner, Liam Hemsworth.

But shortly after, Billy Ray posted the exact same picture with a different caption, saying, "Whoa! Don't jump the gun." What does it all mean?

The jury is still out, but one thing is for sure: Billy Ray is a drama queen.

Jennifer Lopez is dating Alex Rodriguez now

Jennifer Lopez is still relying heavily on rumors about who she is dating to keep her name in people's mouths. And clearly, it's working.

First it was a maybe fake relationship with Drake, carried out conspicuously via Instagram. Then it was a mysterious source gabbing about her explosive chemistry with ex Ben Affleck. Now it's literally a Bahamian vacation with Alex Rodriguez — apparently, the two are enjoying some time together at an exclusive owners-only destination in the Bahamas. I see you, J.Lo.

Lopez, 47, and Rodriguez, 41, have apparently been dating for months. You mean to tell me that Drake and Ben were just a ruse? Wow. I truly cannot believe it.

According to Page Six, they like each other because they both have Latin roots and also children. So do a million other people, but OK.

Mary-Kate Olsen confirms marriage

Mary-Kate Olsen is opening up about her marriage to Olivier Sarkozy for some reason.

In an interview with The Edit, the 30-year-old tries to make it sound like she's a normal person living an ordinary, mediocre life. Which, nah girl. "I think we're lucky [working hard] comes quite naturally ... But then I have a husband, two step-kids and a life; I have to go home and cook dinner. I run on the weekend."

The couple wed in a secret ceremony in November 2015. They now live together in a $6.25 million townhouse in Manhattan. Because you know they're just normal, regular people living their normal, regular-ass lives.

Eat like Tom Brady

If you're like us, your only prior association with Tom Brady and carrots was a daydream of the legendary quarterback morphing into a goat, then running on a treadmill toward Alex Guerrero's outstretched hand.

That aside, the union of TB12 (Brady's nutritional training plan) and vegan meal plan company Purple Carrot may have just revolutionized the health industry.

That's right: starting April 3, you can have Tom Brady's food stuffs delivered straight to your door. Or, in other words, you can now enjoy the stamina necessary to withstand several rewatches of Super Bowl LI without having to leave your couch.

Here's how it works: $78/week gets you three two-serving meals. Per TB12 regulations, each dish — the white lentil risotto looks like a winner, as does the ramen bowl with charred broccolini — is plant-based, gluten-free, high in protein and low in shame (sugar, soy, processed ingredients, etc.). So there's no need to feel bad when you eviscerate the rest of the field at the alumni golf tournament.

Your body is a temple. The guy who stuffed you in lockers had it coming.

At any rate, the next time you're about to scour the internet for avocado ice cream recipes, search disappointingly for Brady's $200 cookbook on Amazon (it's sold out), or hold yourself otherwise digestively accountable, just stop it: you're making it hard on yourself.

Brady's TB12 Performance Meals can be ordered with a click of the mouse. Might we recommend the crispy turnip cakes, with a side of clutch gene? GORDON DONNELLY

John Goodman is a Brie Larson superfan

The legendary actor talks "Kong: Skull Island" and being a "scholar" of "SNL."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

John Goodman plays a government agent who lures military brass out to a remote part of the world in "Kong: Skull Island." CHUCK ZLOTNICK

John Goodman is in august company in "Kong: Skull Island." Not only does he get to hang with the ape behemoth himself; the cast includes Tom Hiddleston, Samuel L. Jackson, John C. Reilly and, perhaps best of all, Brie Larson.

"She was going back and forth between rolling in the mud and going back to Los Angeles every other week for another award — having her fingernails cleaned and getting dolled up," Goodman recalls.

Goodman — who plays a scientist who engineers a government mission to a far-flung South Pacific island, brimming with prehistoric life — gushes about the "Room" star, who in real life is excitable and endearing.

"She hasn't been crushed by life yet, so she's kind of fun to watch," he jokes.

Goodman has a healthy streak of self-deprecation and honesty. He can also be insecure and shy. These may be surprising things to learn. Onscreen he tends to play forces of life who won't shut up: Dan Connor on "Roseanne," Walter Sobchak in "The Big Lebowski," Sulley in "Monsters Inc."

The real Goodman is a man of few words. He doesn't like to talk about his craft. He'll give you short answers. He likes to chat but he rarely holds court, rattling off the kind of perfectly worded monologues he's scored in, say, the six movies he's made with the Coen brothers.

"I'm not a good storyteller. Never have been," Goodman admits. "I learned that a long time ago. I'd try to tell jokes and put too much detail into them. Nobody gave a s— when I got to the punchline."

At least he can pass for a golden-tongued storyteller onscreen. "Somebody writes [the words] for me. I'm OK with a script," he says, with a laugh.

One upside to this is an interviewer can feel relaxed talking to Goodman, knowing you can avoid the usual stock questions about production stories and deeper thoughts. Instead you just chit-chat, see where the conversation takes you.

So our conversation ambles. Surely he remembers one of the previous "Kong" outings: the semi-forgotten blockbuster made in 1976, starring Jeff Bridges, Charles Grodin and Jessica Lange, who played the blond bombshell that ensnares the big beast's heart?

"Poor Jessica. She was so good that people thought she was this f—ing bimbo," he recalls. The actress' breakthrough almost destroyed her career soon as it started. "Boy, she came back strong."

Goodman even remembers the "King Kong" parody from a 1976 episode of "Saturday Night Live," in which John

"Kong" vs Trump:

Goodman, who recently swung by "SNL" to play Rex Tillerson during one of its savage Trump takedowns, even gets to make a political joke in "Kong." In one of the opening scenes, his character swings into D.C. in the midst of massive protests. He jokes that Washington will never be this chaotic. (Wink wink.)

"We shot that during a reshoot," he says, noting that its timeliness wasn't that accidental. Then his brutally honest streak comes swinging back: "I thought it was a little too on-the-head. But apparently it works."

Belushi played superproducer Dino de Laurentiis. Goodman has been on "SNL" 13 times, either as host or doing a quickie cameo. He calls himself a "scholar" of the show, a fan since its inception.

"The first season had such a huge impact on me," he remembers. He was a "National Lampoon freak," and he was tickled that many of the rag's writers wound up behind the scenes on a national phenomenon. When it started in 1975, he had just moved to New York and was struggling to get by.

"Danny [Aykroyd] was 10 days younger than me. Having somebody my own age on the show was f—ing brilliant," he says.

Single and Swiping

Laurie Davis Edwards is the founder of eFlirt, an online dating concierge service, and the best-selling author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating."

In a world where everyone is dating multiple people, dating can feel transient. Maybe it often leaves you wondering things like, "Will I get a text ... or is this it?"

It's rare to stop and revel in the glow of the flirtation and let the experience sink in. Even if it was a great date, you start worrying that you weren't engaging enough to get a second date, or wondering if there is someone better your match is seeing. Because you've been there before — you've had an awesome date ... and then the person ghosted you.

The problem with immediately concerning yourself with the outcome of this next date is that it removes you from the choice. Instead, you're completely at your date's mercy — and that's not true.

So instead of stressing and overthinking after your next date, do this:

Consider what YOU want. Take a moment and let that date sink in. How did it feel? Do YOU want to see this person again? Because you both have a choice to make. You both have to opt-in to another date. So before you see their text (or not), decide on your preference. It's nice to be wanted, but it's even better to know what you want.

It's best to make this decision immediately after the date when you're feeling that connection most (or a lack of one). Then, you can be sure you're making the choice from the place of how the connection feels for you, rather than intellectualizing and overthinking the decision later.

If you decide that another date would be great, send a thank you text. Let your match know you had a great time and mention something specific you enjoyed about your time together. Not only does it re-open the digital lines of communication so planning another date is easy, but it subtly shows your desire to continue connecting. And yes, ladies, you can do this too! Many tell me they don't want to initiate because it's masculine — but instead, consider this leading with appreciation and desire, which is very clearly in your feminine power.

And if you're not into them, that's OK too. There's no need to reach out again, but if they do, make sure you reply with a "S-t sandwich" instead of ghosting.

SARA FEINSTEIN

You've probably heard it a thousand times: Creating a LinkedIn profile is crucial.

But that doesn't mean simply uploading your past work experience and an endorsement or two, explains branding expert, author and founder of LinkedIn-Makeover.com, Donna Serdula. In fact, rushing through the process might actually be doing yourself a disservice.

"LinkedIn is a tool, so you have to use it like a tool," says Serdula. "You have to be very strategic, and that's where most people struggle, because it's not always extremely obvious."

We spoke with Serdula for a few tips for getting the most out of the professional networking site:

Optimize your profile

The first misstep in creating a LinkedIn profile is assuming that copying and pasting your resume is enough, says Serdula. Except it's not. "Doing that is like saying, 'Eh, this is what I've done,' she explains, as opposed to, 'This is who I am, this is what I'm passionate about, this is my mission, this is what I'm trying to accomplish.'"

A standout profile begins with a professionally shot smiling photo, and an engaging headline — one that gives viewers a sense of what you provide, and most importantly, entices them to want to click and read more, says Serdula. But the summary is where you really get to sell yourself, she explains. "You want it to be conversational, compelling, unique, in-

Your LinkedIn image is the first thing your prospective hiring manager will see, so it's important to get it right, says Serdula. "You want to make sure it's professionally taken, and that you're smiling and look friendly," she explains. "This is your face to the world."

Here's a checklist for what to keep in mind:

- Look straight into the camera
- Use a pale color/white background
- Zoom in close, frame your face
- Dress professionally
- Do not have others in the shot is very much like an old-fashioned Rolodex," says Serdula. "And an empty Rolodex is useless." If you want to find success on LinkedIn, you need to be constantly building a strong network, and connecting with the people you meet along the way. "It's not just something that you do once, but it's something that you need to incorporate into your everyday life," she explains.

But building your network is only the first step. Next you need to learn how to leverage those contacts. That means going through your connections and asking them for introductions.

Of course, there's also the more subtle approach: using what you garner from people's profiles to forge your own connections, says Serdula. It could be something as simple as looking through their mutual connections, she explains. "Just knowing that you know someone in common is a great way of breaking the ice."

Be active

For many people, creating content to share can be difficult and extremely time consuming, says Serdula, but that doesn't mean you can't still be active on LinkedIn. There's always the option of commenting on and sharing other people's content, she explains. Her motto: "If you can't create - curate."

Plus, today everyone has such a short-term memory, she explains. "By connecting with that person and staying a part of their life by commenting on their statuses, they're going to remember you," she says. "And when they do need what you offer, they're more likely to reach out."

teresting, but even more so, you want it to align with what that target audience is interested in learning about you," says Serdula. "Make it that elevator pitch."

Another tip: incorporate search phrases. "You want to be very strategic and think, if someone is looking for me, what kind of words would they be typing into the search engine," she says. "Then make sure you use those keywords throughout your profile."

Build and use your network

Design thinking is revolutionizing the classroom

This innovative approach to learning may transform the way teachers and students think about creative problem-solving.

typically rewards students for coming up with the "right answer," and quickly, the design thinking method values the process over the end product.

that children could wear after surgery that would be affordable and of high-quality.

The students began by traveling to Brazil and observing clini-

And that was just one example of the methodology being rolled out, says Stein Greenberg. As educators seek to learn more about design thinking and how they can incorporate its principles into their classrooms, there have been a variety of conference sessions and certificate programs that have emerged to accommodate demand.

When executed properly, "Design thinking teaches students the value of empathy for others, collaboration with team members, and the many intricacies of creative problem solving," says Stein Greenberg.

It also prepares them to tackle the problems of a world that is growing increasingly complex.

"Our school system is still trapped in an old paradigm where the model of learning is fairly rigid, with a very strong adherence to a testing based culture," she explains.

"We want to see students be more prepared for navigating ambiguous problems, and the kinds of tools that we use within design are a way to potentially come up with very powerful and innovative solutions for the future."

A new approach to learning is turning the traditional education model on its head.

"Design thinking" lets students tackle a problem they want to solve by first identifying real human issues, like chronic pain and bullying in schools.

They then research and develop a wide range of possible solutions, which they take into the field to test with real people. The process has been trending among educators.

"We put the power in the hands of the students," says Sarah Stein Greenberg, executive director of Stanford University's d.school of design. "They're the ones that actually navigate the ambiguity of uncovering what those needs might be, and then figuring out how they can be satisfied."

While the standard educational approach

In other words, students need to be comfortable with failure, and ready to continuously generate and test out new ideas.

She gives the example of a group of students at Stanford who used the design-thinking method to address the issue of clubfoot in developing countries. Their task: to come up with a brace cians working in hospitals, and staying with families of children who had the condition. When they returned, they went straight to the drawing board: brainstorming and prototyping possible solutions. The end product which they designed — an injection molded brace — is now being tested all over the world.

Breaking down March Madness

Here's a bird's-eye look at the four regions in this year's bracket.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Here's a brief primer on each of the four regions as you get ready to gamble when March Madness kicks off this week. Be sure to pick up Tuesday's Metro for a two-page, pull-out, fill-out bracket:

East Regional

Top seed: Villanova
Teams to watch: No. 2 Duke, No. 3 Baylor, No. 8 Wisconsin, No. 5 Virginia
Sleepers: No. 12 UNC Wilmington, No. 13 East Tennessee State
Player to watch: Josh Hart, Villanova
Breakdown: The top overall seed is Villanova — no surprise — and they'll begin their title defense in Buffalo where they will be pitted against the winner of the first-four match up between New Orleans and Mount St. Mary's.

On upset alert surely is No. 5 Virginia, which will have to contend with No. 12 UNC Wilmington — a team that nearly upset Duke a year ago.

Let the Villanova title defense begin. GETTY IMAGES

Speaking of Duke, the ACC champs will be playing with purpose being overlooked for a No. 1 seed. Any renegade Final Four hopeful will have to pass through Nova and Duke, a tall task.

Midwest Regional

Top seed: Kansas
Teams to watch: No. 2 Louisville, No. 5 Iowa State, No. 3 Oregon
Sleepers: No. 12 Nevada
Player to watch: Frank

Mason, Kansas
Breakdown: Kansas earns a No. 1 seed for a ridiculous 13th time and starts close to home in Tulsa against the winner of NC Central and UC Davis' play-in game.

They'll face the winner of a very tough, big conference 8-9 match when Miami and Michigan State face off.

Iowa State, fresh off a Big 12 tournament title, will look to avoid a big upset against Nevada in a 12-5 match to watch.

Louisville has the chance to make a run at a Final Four spot with the No. 2 seed as does Oregon at No. 3 in the region.

A Big 10 Tournament Title got Michigan a No. 7 seed where they'll be on upset watch against No. 10 Oklahoma State.

South Regional

Top seed: North Carolina
Teams to watch: No. 2 Kentucky, No. 3 UCLA,

No. 4 Butler

Sleepers: No. 10. Wichita State, No. 12 Middle Tennessee

Player to watch: Malik Monk, Kentucky
Breakdown: UNC as a No. 1 seed comes as a bit of a surprise, as they lost twice to No. 2 Duke (the eventual ACC Tournament winner) but they did win the ACC regular season crown. After they take care of Texas Southern they'll face the winner of Seton Hall and Arkansas.

Butler is a team to watch, as the Bulldogs have beaten No. 2 overall Nova twice. Kentucky at No. 2 is also a big threat to make it to the Final Four as is No. 3 UCLA.

West Regional

Top seed: Gonzaga
Teams to watch: No. 2 Arizona, No. 5 Notre Dame, Sleepers: No. 13 Bucknell, No. 14 Florida Gulf Coast, No. 7 St. Mary's
Player to watch: Nigel Williams-Goss, Gonzaga
Breakdown: Playing way out west, No. 1 Gonzaga is a under the radar in the WAC. But at 32-1 and a top seed they won't be overlooked much longer. They have one of the easiest roads to a Final 4.

Northwestern makes its first ever appearance as a No. 8 seed, and they'll face No. 9 Vanderbilt in Salt Lake City Thursday.

Princeton won the first-ever Ivy League tournament and will play Notre Dame as a 12-seed.

Arizona at No. 2 is another big contender in the West, but No. 3 Florida State better watch out against legendary Cinderella FGCU.

Patriots trade for Cooks, may be shooting for undefeated season

Winning Lombardi Trophies has become old hat, so it looks like the Patriots are gearing up to try and get that NFL Holy Grail they missed out on 10 years ago: an undefeated Super Bowl winning season.

Hours after landing defensive end Kony Ealy from the Panthers Friday, the Pats acquired wide receiver Brandin Cooks from the Saints.

The Pats will give up their first-round pick in this year's draft and their third-round pick (103 overall), according to ESPN reports. The Pats receive Cooks and the Saints' fourth-round pick in 2017.

Cooks gives Tom Brady his best deep threat since Randy Moss, and Cooks is considerably younger than Moss was when he landed with the Pats a decade ago. One could easily make the case that Cooks will be the most talented young receiver Brady has ever played with.

The Pats did not have to part with cornerback Malcolm Butler in the deal, which had been rumored. The Pats still own the rights to Butler, but the two sides are in something of a dispute right now.

If Bill Belichick is able to retain Butler, the Patriots will be able to start three former Pro Bowlers in their secondary in the newly acquired Stephon Gilmore, Devin McCourty and Butler.

ESPN's Adam Schefter reported Friday night that the "Saints and Patriots could still consider a trade later on for CB Malcolm Butler, whose name arose in talks for WR Brandin Cooks, per source."

The big moves are an obvious departure from how the Patriots typically do business this time of year. The only other time the Pats

If this week proves anything, it's that the Patriots refuse to ever get complacent. GETTY IMAGES made this many big moves in an offseason was in 2007 when they brought in Moss, Wes Welker, Donte Stallworth and Adalius Thomas. That season, the Patriots became the only team in NFL history to finish a regular season 16-0, but fell short of 19-0 when they fell to the Giants in Super Bowl XLII.

Bladder Pain

urinary urgency, and/or frequency?

LEADERSHIP 301

a research study for Interstitial Cystitis/Bladder Pain Syndrome may be right for you

Interstitial cystitis, also known as bladder pain syndrome (IC/BPS), is a bladder disease with symptoms that include, bladder pain, urinary urgency (feeling a strong need to urinate), and urinary frequency (having to urinate often).

Living with IC/BPS can be challenging. There is currently no cure for IC/BPS, and effective treatment options are limited.

The LEADERSHIP 301 Trial is a clinical research study evaluating an investigational drug to see if it will reduce the bladder pain of IC/BPS and relieve other symptoms such as urinary frequency. The study drug is a new type of medication that may help reduce inflammation in the bladder.

You may qualify if you:

- Are between the ages of 18 and 80
- Have been diagnosed with IC/BPS for at least 3-months
- Consistently experience bladder pain and frequent, urgent trips to the bathroom

Qualified participants will receive study drug and all study-related care at no charge.

For example, the PILLAR clinical study will look at how a medication approved to treat OAB symptoms affects people with OAB who are greater or equal to 65 years old.

Study-related medications will be provided free of charge.
